MORE ON RED CHINA

Red China has been much in the news lately, because of its help to the Communists (Viet Cong) in the South Viet Nam war and the belief that Peking is about to touch off its first atom bomb.

Joseph R. Grew

All this publicity seems sure to stir up various persons and groups, here and abroad, that continually urge the United States to soften its attitude toward Red China.

We're told that you can't ignore the existence of 650-700 million human beings . . . that we should get to know the Chinese Reds better, and vice versa . . . that there is a lot of money to be made out of unrestricted trade with Mao Tze-tung's alleged government at Peking . . . and so on and so forth.

Hence, argue these persons and groups, the United States should recognize Red China, exchange ambassadors and consuls with it, and stop opposing its admission to the United Nations.

We are also urged either to abandon our powerful friend and ally, Nationalist China (on the island of Taiwan, or Formosa), or turn it over to a United Nations trusteeship, or persuade it to consent to the indefinite existence of two Chinas.

Into this picture comes a longstanding and highly respectable organization.

We're speaking of The Committee of One Million Against the Admission of Communist China to the United Nations (Joseph R. Grew, honorary chairman), Suite 905, 79 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016; MU 5-0190.

The case against our warming up to Red China is as strong as ever, says the committee, and it is a patriotic duty of all Americans to help Congress and the White House maintain stiff backbones in the matter.

No Deals

Voters are urged to find out where candidates for President, Vice President, Senate and House in the current campaigns stand on the question of U.S. relations with Red China.

Those who oppose any change in these relations deserve your vote, says the committee. Those who advocate our softening up in any way do not deserve your vote—because, knowingly or unknowingly, they favor making it easier than it is now for Reds the world over to advance their criminal conspiracy.

That conspiracy's objective is the enslavement of the human race under Communism—after which, progress would come to a standstill, and we would all be as "happy" as presentday Cubans, Russians or mainland Chinese.

This newspaper endorses the Million Committee's stand 100%, and wishes overwhelming defeat at the polls on Nov. 3 to every candidate who favors any slightest U.S. move to please, appease or help Red China.
